Library News

By Carol Jones
Even the most inherently lazy people among us can't seem to help being invigorated to some degree by the arrival of spring. Notice the light, airy little bounce that suddenly affects not only the footsteps of the avid worker, but also livens the step avid worker, but also livens the step of the sluggard who has spent his or her winter days-and many of the nights-perched on a sofa in front of a TV set with a favorite snack. Asdly, the true sluggards will revert to their usual patterns after awhile, but for a brief time the emergence of ing will catch all of us in its grip and renew our spirits in spite of eve rything. The sun, the warm breeze, the insects and birds twittering, all stir a primitive sense of oneness with help responding to on some genetic with the onset of our latest spurt With the onset of our latest spur-of warm weather, I've began to rec-optize the signs in many of the folk who visit the library, especially that bouncy step. Their overall moods, which also appear to be lighter, are reflected not only in the tone of their voices, but in their mode of dress and in their book selections as well. Many patrons are now selecting fewer books to read in order to make time for upcoming spring-cleaning projects and yard work. I know where they're coming from.

My own fingers and toes have gun to vibrate with that familiar begun to vibrate with that familiar itch of anticipation that they take on every spring. Hopefully, with much hard work and a little luck, that itch will bear fruition in the form of many beautiful flowers and a productive veggie garden at my house come summer.

So in deference to the arrival of spring, I will be putting our spring gardening display in place very soon.
Books on vegetable and flower gardening, as well as books on soil preparation, and pruning and landscaping will be available for our most ambitious patrons. The information found in these materials caters to both the trons. The inform advanced and the beginning together.
We will also have a variety of seed catalogs available for your perusal

For right now, there are many books presently on display that can help you with any building or rem eling jobs you may plan to tackle this spring. Come in and look them over. I'm sure you can find something of

I would also like to remind all of our patrons to double-check their library cards to see if they are current or expired. You will need to update any card that has expired because you will be required to have them with you for each library service you with you for each library service you request. This is a requirement that all libraries expect of their patrons so please don't ask library staff to dig through numerous files to prove that you have a card. Keeping your card with you at all times is your responsibility of you have overdue books or other library materials, now would be a good time to return those articles. Most of the bar-coding of our books has been completed. Soon we will be loading all the pertinent information into our computers. Any non-returned items by a library patron may result in that person's inability to use our services in the future.

On a final note, we have a few extra books that are new to our library, but which were not listed in Mrs. Robbins' column last week. These include Dead and Gone, a crime novel by award-winning Dorothy Simpson, Dr. Akkins' Age-Defying Diet Revolution by Robert C-Addins, and David Morrell's thriller

Burnt Sienna...
Painters know burnt sienna as the color of earth and fire, the color of passion and life. But when Chase Malone sets eyes on Sienna Bellasar, he sees a beauty unmatched by anyone, or anything he has ever attempted to capture on canvas.
Sienna is the wife of international arms dealer Derek Bellasar, who tries strong-arm Malone into painting portrait. But Malone uses...until he beholds Sienna's beauty. Until the CIA persuades him to spy on Bellasar. And until he learns that Bellasar previously commis-sioned paintings of three earlier wives-weeks before each died in susnicious accidents

cious accidents.

Convinced that Sienna is in terrible danger, Malone vows to rescue her from Bellasar's French Riviera stronghold. Malone believes he can n, outfight and outsmart Bellasar, but there may be no place in the world beyond Bellasar's reach, and no place to hide so beautiful a woman. As Bellasar prepares to test a mon-strous new biological super weapon, Malone and Sienna must take on the ultimate challenge to confront Bella sar on his own territory, exploit his one and only weakness, and try to destroy him.

(KyCGA) Member of the Year at the Sixth Annual Kentucky Commodity Conference Awards Banquest Lanuary 18, 2000 in Louisville. Fulcher-Reynolds, who is also a member of the KyCGA Board of Directors and KyCGA Treasurer, was chosen for the award because of the dedication to the association, and her efforts to go beyond what is expected of her in recruiting members to the association, as well as, proving benefits to members and corn producers in southeastern Kentucky. Last October the National Corn Growers Association bonored Fulcher-Reynolds as the top membership recruiter for the division in which Kentucky belongs. She has also been recognized whice as the top membership recruiter in the nation, and has hopes of doing the same for year 7000.
