In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of Raymond Bradley Damrell, who passed away on March 9, 2000 Dear Mommy & Daddy, I am writing this letter to let you

Even though I was a baby I can still

I know you want me back everyday Now I am in heaven and I want to ommy, I'm not sure but I think it's a light This place is just so bright

There is one thing I want you to Right now I am holding your hand. Mommy and Daddy, my body is at rest But my soul is having the best

I can run and I can play Even made a new friend and his name

We can swing and we can slide There is even a white pony that can ride Jay and I never feel sad And we don't ever feel bad.

You should be happy and just smile You can be with me in a little while You're the best parents I ever had Now that I am gone don't feel bad.

It's not your fault that I went It was God's angel that He sent Mommy the last time you kissed me I was happy as could be.

And Daddy the last time you said I You're the best daddy and you let it shine through Now I am sitting on Jesus' lap

I can run and play, and at any time take a nap.

Up here it is so warm, and so snug Everyday I get the biggest bestes hug hug
The best hug from Mommy and Daddy too
And from me one special kiss for

I know when you see a baby you think of me But Mommy and Daddy PLEASE let it be!!

it bell' it bell' This is a miracle and a bliss Mornmy and Daddy one last hug and a really big KISS! Love you forever, Bradley We love you and miss you so much beautiful Love, Mommy, Angie, Papaw & Mamaw, Kim, and the rest of your loving family!

"Sweet n' Sour"

Judy, only five years old, but always a helper when there was work to be done, tried to help but was more help done, tried to help but was more help doing chores in the house and watch-ing two year old Rodney.

Mat wrote back he had a job at the Wright Plant, a top notch defense plant close to Reading, Ohio. Wages were high and he was soon sending, a check back to us. But that didn't satisfy me, I wanted to be doing, something too. All the women in my family had defense jobs and kept writing about the good wages they were making and I knew I could also be doing that kind of work and making money the same as they were. Mat's siblings were already there, doing the same thing and I felt left out. I wrote Mat that me and the two children were coming up so I could also get a job but his answer was he would rather I stay home and take care of things there. That didn't set too well with me for I felt was pulling more than my share of the heavy load of faking care of a undown farm and not getting the pay I, would be getting there for doing, so, I found a young couple to refut our house, packed our colotes and Judy, Rodney and I caught the bus to Somerset, and the comment of the com care of things there. That didn't set too well with me for I felt I was pullthey couldn't be put back in, and my very first paycheck had already paid for an operation that wasn't needed. Yes, I was still hounded by things I couldn't control.

Our Neighbors

Rabbits nestle in a bed of native grasses. Butterflies flutter among a patch of wildflowers. And a mother raccoon gathers food for her babies.

A nature preserve? Not really. It's a transmission corridor owned and maintained by Kentucky's Touchstone Energy Cooperatives. The pathway that brings power to your home is also home to many rare plants and animals.

A two-year study of our transmission corridors throughout the Daniel Boone National Forest found many rare plants growing beneath our power lines. Several of the species were thought to be near extinction. As a result, our biologists continually monitor the pathways to help protect these plants and the wildlife that live among them.

But that's only part of our commitment to the environment. Each year, our cooperatives bring nature into hundreds of classrooms throughout Kentucky. Students learn about the plants and animals of our great commonwealth. And hopefully, they will grow up to be strong stewards of our natural resources neighbors - all of our neighbors.

Kentucky's Touchstone Energy Cooperatives are proud to be nationally recognized leaders in environmental education and preservation. Because that means we're doing our best for our communities and our
