Dyehouse National Winner

John William Dyehouse, 18, of the Rockcastle County FFA Chapter is the national winner in the Home and/or Community Development - Entrepreneurship/Placement proficiency award program at the 73rd National FFA Convention Oct. 26-28, in Louisville.

Proficiency awards recognize FFA members who excelled as agricultural entrepreneurs, employees or volunteers while they gained hands-on career experience. Home and/or Community Development - Entrepreneurship/Placement is one of 45 FFA proficiency award categories offered at local, state and national levels. The home and/or community Development proficiency award program is sponsored by Carhart, Inc. as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

John's SAE program has helped him set a definite career course. His family lived in a house that needed remodeling. In the process of the project, John developed skills in plumbing, installing vinyl siding, roofing and replacing floor beams. He has also landscaped, built fences and a barn. John is attending a community college and plans to transfer to the University of Kentucky majoring in agricultural engineering. John's FFA advisors are Jeff Hayes and Roy Reynolds. John is the son of Kenneth E. and Kathy B. Dyehouse.

The Face of the Future

Ask a farmer why they grow burley tobacco and the answer will probably be, because that's what their families have relied on to feed them for generations. There's a pride in their land and burley tobacco is a product that enjoys world-wide demand. Most burley is grown on small, family-owned farms that could be devastated without tobacco.

For decades, the Burley Price Support Program and auction system has helped tobacco growers support their family farms and their communities. The Program keeps tobacco prices stable and ensures our farming families are able to continue growing burley, a crop world renowned for its superior quality.

The Burley Price Support Program. A program that works for everyone.
