Building at Brodhead

Work is progressing on the new school building at Brodhead.

This week, workers were busy setting steel beams on the 60,000 square foot structure.

Rockcastle resident and job site superintendent Blaine McHargue said that construction on the new building was about a week behind schedule because of bad weather.

The new building will cost tax payers approximately $6 million and is slated to be completed by the beginning of school in August.

The new building is located in the former ball field
