LEADING THE WAY...

Joe Freeman, OT, knows what it's like to be immobile. After a car accident in high school, he was unable to move for a few days. And it made him wonder what it's like for people who suffer from debilitating illnesses. A few years later, he decided to become an occupational therapist to help those who want to learn to live independently again.

Joe sees himself as a teacher and coach who helps people relearn how to do the things most of us take for granted, like dressing, loading the dishwasher or cooking. He and the RHRCC Occupational Therapy team work one-on-one with ... in Healthcare people of all ages to help them achieve the highest quality lifestyle possible.

"The best thing about what I do is helping people to live a more independent life."

— Joe Freeman, OT
