"Food for the Future" is theme of 2003 Soil and Water Stewardship Week

The ability to feed a world that could grow to eight billion by 2030 is a serious task that will require a serious stewardship ethic among all of us, according to organizers of the 2003 Soil and Water Stewardship Week observance, set for April 27-May 4. Food for the future will come from those people and nations fortunate enough to have the soil and water for agricultural production, the ability to provide stewardship for the land and the freedom to pursue their agriculture in peace. "Despite our struggles over technical and ethical questions involved in increasing food production, the world's food still depends on an adequate supply of good farmland," said Tammy H. Mink, chairperson of the Rockcastle County Conservation district, local sponsor of this year's Soil and Water Stewardship Week. "Our conservation district is in the business of providing conservation technical assistance to farmers and ranchers on private, working lands who want to reduce soil erosion, improve water quality and make a better home for wildlife," he added. The special observance theme, "Food for the Future," addresses the most basic issue any society faces and one of the most complex. In today's world and for tomorrow's needs, an ample supply of food requires: "Productive soils and ample water supplies, maintained in a clean and health condition by people who practice effective resource stewardship. A wide and diverse variety of food crop strains protected so that

Doctors forming new practice

Doctors Michael Hamilton and Kevin Rowe are merging their practices to become Rockcastle Family Health beginning May 5. The new practice will be located in Dr. Rowe's office in the Rockcastle Medical Arts Building. "Merging the two practices will be advantageous for patients because it will allow them to schedule appointments sooner and provide better back up coverage if one of us is unavailable," Dr. Hamilton said. Rowe said the merger is just another way to better meet the community's healthcare needs. "We focus on quality family healthcare, so it makes a lot of sense for the two of us to work together," Dr. Rowe said. "Being ill is difficult enough for patients and families, so we want to do whatever we can to make ourselves accessible when people need us." Hours for the new practice are 8:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. For more information or to schedule and appointment, call 256-0919 or 256-4148.
