and making use of their pocketknives was an ordinary occurrence at Mt. Vernon Elementary School during the time when I was a student.

I am more grateful all the time that I grew up in an age in which no one had to fear a boy with a knife. Our generation actually had the luxury of coming of age during a time in which the only major fear we knew had nothing to do with violence or crime – it was the discipline meted out by our parents and teachers. It was a time that is no more, and I am so glad that I was there.

Thanks to Judge and Fiscal Court...

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the dozens of families who have received assistance from the Daniel Boone Chapter of the American Red Cross, I would like to publically thank County Judge Executive Buzz Carloftis and the members of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court for their generous donation to our organization. Over the past two years, the Red Cross has invested almost ten thousand dollars to help families who have experienced loss of their homes and possessions primarily to house fires in Rockcastle County alone. Moreover, the Daniel Boone Chapter assisted in helping victims of the tornado outbreak of 2012 in every community that was affected.

When most people think of the Red Cross, they imagine assistance to victims of major disasters such as Hurricane Katrina on the Gulf Coast or Tropical Storm Sandy in the northeastern United States.

Although the loss of one home isn't generally classified as a major disaster, it is just as devastating to the individual victims. When those smaller individual disasters occur, the Red Cross is just as responsive paying for lodging, clothing, and food for families who have lost everything until they can get back on their feet as they are to the victims of larger catastrophes.

Additionally, the Daniel Boone Chapter, which covers five counties, offers classes in Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation, water safety, and various courses in disaster response.

The Red Cross receives no funding from either the federal or state governments and relies entirely on donations to do its valuable work.

Again, my personal thanks and, in the name of the families who have received assistance, thank you.

Roger Coldiron
Board of Directors, Daniel Boone Chapter of the American Red Cross
